

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

The methods proposed by the Sharon resolution in the Senate for dealing with the Constitutional Amendments seems to be the only practical way out of the difficulty.

Scores of attempts have been made in the interest of the State to alter the Constitution without the expense of a Constitutional Convention.

The reason of a few clerical omission and neglect certain technicalities of procedure the work of several sessions of the Legislature has been made null and void and a large expense saddled upon the tax-payers.

The method proposed by these Concurrent Resolution is direct and and practical, and the shortest and the cheapest route to the object in view.

The people will have a chance to vote upon each amendment intelligently and not have the consideration of their merits or demerits hampered by the claims of political candidates.

This is the only way a constitutional election should be held if it is the wish of the law makers that the voters should have an opportunity of giving the matter the consideration it deserves.

The special election will be held in February and then such legislation as is necessary and which can only be done if the amendments pass, can be handled intelligently before the close of the session.

To the Farmer.

The Reno Gazette prints the following sensible article. It is quite applicable to this section and we reproduce it, hoping it may prove as seed sown in good soil:

"Did it ever occur to the farmers of this county that they spend nearly $100,000 per annum for ham and bacon that they might just as well raise as not? And did it ever occur to them that they pay out enough annually for fruit, vegetables, flower and such like, that they might just as well raise, to more than pay the expenses of running their farms? We think not for if they did, they would certainly turn over a leaf. The average farm will produce everything necessary to the support of a family except tea, coffee, sugar and spices, and if they would raise a few chickens, turkeys and ducks, with a little ham and bacon to sell occasionally, they would derive a revenue sufficient to pay for those things.

This Winter there has been 100,000 chickens shipped from Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa to this Coast that the farmers of Nevada ought to supply. The sagebrush lands are well adapted to the raising of chickens, and a few acres of now idle and worthless land could be made profitable by digging a well and putting a chicken-house on it.

There is money in raising turkeys at from $1.50 to $2.00 apiece and in chickens at from $6 to $9 per dozen.

The soil of the State is especially adapted to the raising of peas, and no better hog feed grows. There is no better ham made than the Westphalian, and there is no such a thing as a corn-fed hog in Westphalia.

We see no reason why Nevada should not at least supply enough ham and bacon for home consumption, and thereby save a large sum of money. Let the farmers thing of this, and see if they don't come to the conclusion that it is better to raise their own pork."

The Eclipse at Landy.

The eclipse came to pass according to programme, says the Homer Index. The sky was cloudless and all conditions favorable for smoked glass observations. When the sun was nearly obscured the ragged crags, about us assumed a weird and corpsey aspect. If a snowslide and earthquake could have chipped in about that time it would have been a scene of unparalleled awfulness. As it was the top of Mount Gilcrest glistened in the uncanny glow like the polished scalp of a lecherous old duffer at a model artist show.
